Young Street Thug Flips the Script...

A born survivor, Hezues R' has defeated many obstacles in life. From surviving 22 gunshots to, after years of hard work and dedication, being left with an empty Uptown Manhattan business office. This hungry and humble warrior has dreams of changing negative hip-hop media into a positive future aspiration. His past experiences drive him to overcome all adversities to create something more than a vision. With his talent as a self-made businessman and strong desire to reach his goal, he has now given a new meaning to the hip-hop culture. His ambition has brought about something far greater than a TV show, a movement, and even more than an empire.

He creates inspiration. He exemplifies every possible aspect of an inspirational person, and because he has turned his dream into a reality, so shall he inspire others to do the same. Hezues R' has not only proven himself to be a fighter, but he has also proven to be loyal to himself, his community, and his cause as he strives to become America's next hip hop mogul.

“Inspiration is my gift to the world”, says Hezues R'.

inside scoop

Guns4Cameras is a new non-profit organization, founded by Hezues R., which has been designed to encourage today's youth to replace violence for video. The program will allow participants to turn in any firearm, no questions asked, in exchange for a video camera.

After being shot 22 times and teaching himself the art of production, Hezues decided it was time to give back. G4C will provide free entrance to hip-hop concerts, provided that each attendee turns in a firearm. At that time they are given a video camera and the opportunity to film the concert.

G4C will be working closely with law enforcement and district attorneys to ensure that no one will have to worry about facing charges for any weapon they turn in. For more info visit their website at www.Guns4Cameras.com.
